She has been benefiting from the household visits program from VVC since the beginning of the TUWALINDE WATOTO (TW2) project, in January 2020 and she has been practicing positive parenting during the implementation of the program and has witnessed a lot of changes in her children’s growth since she started. Lucy Jackson, 28 years old, is a farmer cultivating rice at Dakawa village. She is married to Jackson with two children, both girls (Agnes Fikiri-5 years and Debora Jackson-5 months). Her level of education is that of primary school and she is a normal citizen in her community. In her free time, she teaches other women how to play with their children and the importance of setting time to play with their children.

Before the project, Lucy admits that she did not have any idea on how to talk and sing to her unborn baby because when the VILLAGE VOLUNTEER COUNSELING (VVC) program began she was pregnant with Debora. She did not know the importance of setting time to play with her elder child Agnes and she couldn't manage to feed her on time or help her in counting and identifying things.

The reason behind this is her level of understanding and the lack of enough parental training among married women on how to treat their children. Also, the community she comes from doesn't have the mentality of playing with their children, even if they see you doing so, they call it childish or wasting time with kids.

In solving the issue, SAWA together with community and village leaders organized to have Village Volunteer Counselors to train the women on Nurturing Care Framework through Social Welfare officers and later help in training parents with under 5 children on home-based ECD services by conducting household visits weekly.

I am thankful to the VVC for spending their time to come and visit us all this time and to SAWA for introducing us to this good program We pray that all parents could have the same opportunity to be able to raise our children in a proper way

Lucy Jackson

For the first time LUCY in her motherhood, experienced her child responding while talking and singing compared to before when she was not aware of it. In the future, she plans to continue with the program even if it comes to an end, and she will continue to carry out the parenting program for children and keep educating other parents during her extra time.

“I am thankful to the VVC for spending their time to come and visit us all this time and to SAWA for introducing us to this good program_ We pray that all parents could have the same opportunity to be able to raise our children in a proper way” says Lucy Jackson a mother of two children (Agnes and Debora) who has been benefiting from home based ECD services from Village Volunteer Counselor.
